Forecast for Wednesday 07 Jul 2021

Weather: Extensive low cloud is expected at first, with this likely to produce some light rain at times, especially on west-facing ground. This should lift and break somewhat into the morning, with some limited sunny intervals from mid-morning in places. These should in turn spark increasingly heavy showers, with some slow-moving and potentially thundery with hail later in the day. Conditions probably improving into the evening, with some late sunshine.

Chance of cloud free mountain/hill tops above 600m: Near-nil at first, with extensive cloud above 400 metres, but improving to 80% before midday as this lifts clear and develops breaks. Some further deteriorations possible locally in heavy showers.

Visibility: Poor at first but improving to very good during the morning, but with significant local deterioration possible in showers.
